

Training Services Group

NATA's Training Services Group is recognised both nationally and internationally for its practical and hands-on approach to training in the development and auditing of laboratory management systems.

We have more than twenty five years of experience delivering our courses to customers both in Australia and worldwide. NATA courses have been conducted in sixteen countries and the list is growing.

When you choose NATA for your training partner, you tap into the technical expertise of a laboratory accreditation authority that has conducted thousands of audits to the standards of global best practice.

Our training can support your organisation's creation, maintenance and improvement of its quality systems and provide you with the guidelines to meet the criteria required for accreditation.

Our training is divided into three levels to help you choose the course that best suits your needs:

Introductory courses which include basic concepts and a detailed analysis of relevant international standards;

Implementation courses designed to develop your skills to manage and audit laboratory management systems; and

Advanced courses and workshops aimed at further developing existing skills and broadening experiences.

Our teaching approach is centred on a workshop format that is highly interactive and utilises a mix of case studies, role plays and scenarios for effective learning.

Whether your aim is to create new revenue streams, improve workplace safety or achieve savings in production, NATA offers the training to fully support your goals.
